

Congratulations to Lauren Tredinnick, for being among the American Property Casualty Insurance Association's 2021 class of emerging leaders

Lauren Tredinnick, Public Entity Underwriter Manager, Public Entity Risk Solutions, is among a distinguished group of 123 insurance professionals named to the American Property Casualty Insurance Association's 2021 Class of Emerging Leaders.

Each year, the APCIA, the Insurance Careers Movement (ICM), and AM Best recognize rising talent across a broad range of job functions in the insurance industry. Each class of Emerging Leaders is comprised of professionals with no more than eight years of experience in their positions, but who are already making a mark in their companies and in the industry.

This year's winners were lauded for the collaborative work ethic they've shown during the coronavirus pandemic; their efforts to accelerate diversity, equity, and inclusion in insurance; and the innovative ways they support the industry. And each was invited to the 2021 Virtual Emerging Leaders Conference, held February 22-23, 2021.

The annual Emerging Leaders Conference celebrates current C-suite leaders in insurance as well as the industry's rising stars. Though virtual this year, the conference is an opportunity for emerging leaders to learn from seasoned industry executives, get tools and resources to help them succeed in the industry, and network with each other to potentially expand career opportunities.

"Retaining and cultivating top talent is a priority for the insurance industry," says David A. Sampson, President and CEO of APCIA, "and the Emerging Leaders Conference is an opportunity to encourage high performers to remain in the industry and help shape its future."
