Top five reasons why rates are rising

Some may be surprised by LPL rate increases. Here's why the market is hardening:

1. Social inflation

$54M median settlement - top U.S. verdicts 2018

From 2019 to Q2 2020, legal malpractice payouts were the highest on record although number of claims was flat.^{1,2}

2. Increasing claims defense expenses

73% of insurers reported an increase in rates

paid to defense council.³ In 2019, insurers spent between $6.7M and $6.6B in defense and cost containment.⁴

3. Cybersecurity claims

$73K total costs to respond to cybersecurity claims resulting from malware/ransomware attacks.⁵ The severity of these claims, combined with rising attorney fees of 2% to 5% annually,⁶ are driving LPL rates up.

4. Catastrophe, cyber, and other claims

$210B 2020 global losses from natural disasters⁷

Hurricanes, wildfires, and other nat cats can cause rate increases across coverage lines. Average paid loss for a cyber claim rose to $358k in 2020 from $145k in 2019.⁸

5. High-risk practice areas

$300M paid by some insurers who covered law firms practicing in trusts and estates, business transactions, corporate and securities, and other high-risk sectors. Higher rates may be due to the long-tail nature and severity of these claims.²
